Zlotkowski, E. (Ed.). AAHE Monograph Series: Service-Learning in the Disciplines. Washington DC: AAHE

The Service-Learning in the Disciplines series is regarded as a major accomplishment in the U.S. service-learning movement. This monograph series - edited by Edward Zlotkowski and published by the American Association for Higher Education – contains twenty-one volumes. Each provide research, resources and information on how service learning can be implemented within a particular discipline. As seen below, the series covers a wide range of disciplines. This helps dispel the myth that CSL can only be practiced in the social sciences or humanities. The vast range of disciplines provides both theoretical knowledge and practical information such as course models and program descriptions, with contributions from scholars within each of the following disciplines from Environmental Studies, Nursing, Sociology, Architecture, and Management to name a few.

Howard, J. (Ed.). (Summer 2001). Michigan Journal of Community Service Learning: Service-Learning Course Design Workbook, University of Michigan: OCSL Press.

This Workbook is an excellent foundational resource to the academic CSL course development process. The Workbook outlines the essential conditions for academic CSL and walks instructors through the process of designing and developing a CSL course with the ultimate aim to improve CSL practice. Worksheets are provided to help instructors develop academic learning goals, learning strategies, and assessment methods. Available from:
